

By not locking in lower rates when they were available, the Borough paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in additional interest.